Reflection

In this project, I used several online photographs. To credit these, I opened a bibliography page to make sure that I was being ethical with my design and use of these images. This site is made up of my own work, however I did use a number of online tutorials on HTML, CSS and JavaScript. These are located in Google Classroom – in addition I used W3Schools for more information on the tags that I was using. I used some of the supplied links to be inspired by for design on the modern web. There is a problem on the Guides page – that being that it can be slightly hard to scroll, since the iframes/embeds take up a fair amount of the page. This could be improved with a redesign from the storyboard.

I believe that this project was very successful, since I met all the requirements for the project. I also maintained a GitHub repository throughout this process so I could both access my work from anywhere, and so I could show the progression of the site from its early stages to the later stages, and finally to completion. I believe that I have met all the required criteria for Gold or Platinum.
